What is Certified Ethical Hacker - CEH

In the Certified Ethical Hacker (CEH) training you learn to view (and test) the security of an organization through the eyes of a hacker.

Despite all efforts to secure an application or network, hackers still seem to be able to steal critical information from organizations.

The CEH training places you in the shoes of the hacker or cyber criminal, through which you will learn to understand his line of thought, weapons and working method. With this knowledge and acquired skills, after the training you will also be able to test your own network or application for vulnerabilities. This makes CEH unlike most security training courses an offensive training course that will broaden your outlook on security. This training is including the CEH exam.

Who should attend Certified Ethical Hacker - CEH

The application of CEH is wide, so the training is important for many different target groups:

- Security Professionals learn the principles of a penetration test and how hackers deal with various security solutions.
- IT and Security Managers or Security Auditors learn more about the technical vulnerabilities in an organization and the role that the IT department can play in this.
- For System or Network administrators or developers, CEH is the ultimate security awareness training.
