What is Front-end Software Engineering Track

The 'Front-end Software Engineering Track' is a comprehensive training program designed to equip you with the necessary skills to excel as a front-end developer. This includes not only programming but also Agile methodologies, requirements analysis, testing, web technology, and security. You'll be part of a Scrum team, delivering a new release of a web application every week and presenting it to the customer. The training also focuses on personal skills, with coaching provided on both technical and interpersonal aspects. You'll learn HTML, CSS, and JavaScript, and how to test, share, and review code using Git.

Who should attend Front-end Software Engineering Track

- Junior Developers: Looking to specialize in front-end development.
- Full Stack Developers: Wanting to strengthen their front-end skills.
- UX/UI Designers: Wishing to bridge the gap between design and development.
- IT Consultants: Needing to broaden their knowledge base in web technologies.
