What is React Fundamentals

React JS is a flexible JavaScript framework used to develop interactive user interfaces. It's mostly used for the single page applications: web applications that don't work according to the traditional model in which you navigate from one web page to another, but where pieces of content are dynamically replaced like in an app.

The React Fundamentals training is a combination of theory and getting hands-on experience by doing exercises with the goal to get you started with React to develop a web page or (web) application.

Who should attend React Fundamentals

Software developers who are looking to work with React.
