What is Consultancy Skills - Communication

As a professional, you must adeptly interact with individuals both within and outside your organization, who may vary significantly in character, socio-cultural background, and subject matter expertise. Effective communication with colleagues, managers (hierarchical inequality), and employees from diverse departments and organizational levels is essential for various purposes: gathering information, sharing knowledge and insights, and providing advice. Achieving and maintaining constructive communication requires a range of insights and techniques.

During the 'Consultancy Skills - Communication training' communication techniques are explored and practiced, building on the 'Empathic Listening' training. A key focus throughout the training is understanding your own communication style and learning how to adapt it to others. Upon completion, the professionals will be familiar with the most prevalent theories of communication and will be able to optimize their own communication style based on these theories. The ultimate goal is to interact effectively with others to facilitate collaboration while considering your own communication style.
