What is Requirements Analysis

You live in a rapidly changing world, it is important to have clear requirements for your solution. The requirements are the common thread in the change process, you keep coming back to them. How to approach this in a structured way?

After this training, you know and understand the requirements process.

You will gain insight into the requirements process and get to work in groups with the scope and the drafting of various types of requirements using an integral case. So you will practice with the main techniques and after this training you will understand what is needed to elicitate, trace, formulate SMART, capture and review requirements.

This training will give you experience of how the requirements process works. There is enough time available for asking and answering your specific questions.

Who should attend Requirements Analysis

This workshop is for everyone who is starting or already writes requirements or uses requirements. You work for example, in a role as:

- Business analyst
